

R. Andrew (Andy) Hove
Executive Vice President and President, Defense

R. Andrew (Andy) Hove is the Executive Vice President and President, Defense for Oshkosh Corporation. He has responsibility for all aspects of the company's defense business including tactical wheeled vehicles programs, aftermarket parts and service, and advanced technology development. Hove joined the company in March 2009.

Hove has been involved with military and defense industry management for more than 20 years. He is a former army officer who served in tank and mechanized infantry units for most of his 11-year military career. At BAE Systems, Inc., he served as vice president, Combat Systems Programs, where he was responsible for a portfolio of domestic and international ground vehicle programs, including Bradley Combat Systems. Prior to that, he was employed with United Defense in program management, operations and business development. Hove has an extensive international background through foreign assignments with the U.S. Army and international assignments in industry including FNSS Defense Systems, Turkey, and Vinnel Corporation, Saudi Arabia.

Hove holds a bachelor's degree from Nebraska Wesleyan University, a master's degree in national security affairs from the Naval Postgraduate School and a master's degree in business management from the University of Michigan. He also holds a certificate in program management from the Defense Acquisition University.